Energy, its scarcity and cost, is a serious problem in the Keys. So much so that on 25 March Captain Thomas Brown, commanding officer of the U.S. Naval Air Station in Key West, called an urgent meeting of all command officers and chiefs of tenant groups. At this meeting, attended by Key West Bureau chief, Captain Brown reported that the Navy is taking very stringent measures to conserve energy and warned that unless all units should also do so the Navy would not be able to pay for air conditioning come summer. This threat really affects nonreimbursible units and organizations, not FBIS, but the general effect was to make all of us more aware of the special need to conserve energy within our own units. O
